Memorial Day Message

By Lt. Gen. Frank Libutti
Commanding General, Marine Forces Pacific

On May 29, 2000, Americans will gather to honor those service members who have fallen in defense of our nation. I encourage you to remember the selflessness and courage of these heroes who gave their lives so that we may live in a land of freedom and liberty. Memorial day is solemn occasion to reflect on the sacrifices of Marines and Sailors, soldiers, airman and coastguardsmen in the nation's service.

Those we honor on this day did not hesitate when their nation called upon them. Those of us in uniform today also heed that call even though the path is not always easy. As the nation's frontline defenders, we have the responsibility to our nation and reflect the professional example of those who work before us. Our duty is a sacred trust that we will always uphold, in peace or war, we must continue to stand firm to protect our national freedom and security.

Let us also remember that sacrifices have been made by many who did not wear a uniform - let us remember the gold star mothers, the fathers, the spouses and the children of America's fallen warriors. On this solemn day, let us also give thanks to our families for the difficulties they face in supporting as we accomplish our mission.

As we of Marine Forces Pacific join with our fellow Americans in paying our respects, let us rededicate ourselves to the principles of freedom, democracy and justice for which our noble brothers and sisters in uniform paid the ultimate price.

News Briefs

Power Outage

A base wide power outage is scheduled for June 3 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., to install a new master control system.

Commissary Closure

The Commissary will be closed June 3 due to the base-wide power outage. Business will resume June 4.

Air Conditioning

Air conditioning will be turned on when the outside temperature reaches a high of at least 78 degrees for three consecutive days.

Central heating for family housing, barracks and office areas has been turned off for the season. For more information call Utilities Division at 253-4556.

Action Line

The Commanding Officer's Action Line can be used to report concerns or problems that may need command attention.

Callers can communicate a problem or report a violation directly to the command when it's felt the established forums are not working. The Action Line number is 253-3100.

Improper Wheeling

Station residents are reminded that skate boarding and in-line skating in shopping areas and off-station places of business are neither appropriate nor advised.

Also, proper headgear must be worn when skating or biking on or off station.

Seawall

Station residents are reminded to stay off the lip of the seawall while running. Units are also asked to practice "seawall courtesy" and share the space with others.

Marine rescued in Kawakami

by Cpl. Matthew Shaw
Torii Teller Staff

Search and Rescue Marines extracted a Marine who was injured while taking part in a training exercise at the Kawakami training area May 16.

The MWSS-171 Patrol Leaders' Course was on a night patrol, coming down a steep hill when Cpl. Shaun Locklear, MWSS-171 legal clerk, lost his footing and fell forward, hitting a tree with his head.

"When I received the call, I was told that there was a Marine at Kawakami with a possible neck or spinal injury and that he was immobilized," said Gunnery Sgt. Brian Potts, SAR maintenance material control officer.

Potts immediately notified the SAR crew of the situation.

Petty Officer 2nd class Warren Cantrell, SAR corpsman, reduces stretcher movement as the injured Marine is hoisted to the helicopter at Kawakami.

"Everyone was excited because we were going out to help someone — being a fellow Marine, just pumps you up some more," said Maj. Matthew Collins, airfield operations officer and SAR helicopter pilot for the rescue mission.

According to Collins, the SAR crew was already familiar with the Kawakami area and direct communication with the Marines on the ground made it easy to locate the injured Marine.

"He was on the ridgeline, and just over the ridge was a series of high tension power lines. They'll get your attention real quick, especially in a helicopter," Collins said. "We also had probably ten, maybe 15 feet of clearance between the rotor tips and the nearest trees."

Staff Sergeant Christopher Dilport, SAR crew chief, directed the pilot into position about 75 feet above Locklear. He lowered the corpsman to the ground. The corpsman then strapped the injured Marine to the medi-vac litter.

"I just wanted to get down there to him as quickly as possible. I felt a great sense of urgency to see what was going on," said Petty Officer 2nd class Warren Cantrell, SAR corpsman. "I wanted to make sure he was okay and get him back to the clinic and get him checked out."

The corpsman with the Patrol Leaders' Course, Petty Officer 3rd class Markus McKenzie and Gunnery Sgt. Jay Brown, assistant course instructor, administered first aid to Locklear immediately after the accident.

Station playgrounds, the whole picture

by Cpl. Richard Barker

The Facilities Department held a public meeting Thursday in the community room of midrise 658 to discuss the importance of air station playgrounds. After completing a comprehensive playground study, facilities developed an enhancement plan aimed to improve playgrounds. “In the past, playground work has been largely uncoordinated,” said Navy Lieutenant Bill Prout, assistant Facilities officer. “Now we can spend our money more wisely because we have the big picture in mind.” A few things the playground study covered are preventive maintenance requirements, the adequacy of fencing, use of safety tiles, age sensitivity and the condition of equipment.

“We realize there are a lot of parents with young children who need a safe place to go outside and play to exert energy,” said Cdr. Anthony Ermovick, Facilities officer. “Not only do we want to meet Department of Defense regulations for playgrounds, we want community input too.” The Playground Enhancement Plan includes many recommendations that were discussed at the town meeting. Some recommendations involved playground inspections, equipment records, fencing, seating, lighting and signage. While major safety issues will be addressed immediately, the Playground Enhancement Plan is a long-term project that will unfold throughout the next couple years. “We would like to operate the same way a normal city does,” Ermovick said. “In the future, we hope to hold town meetings on all types of issues in order get community input.”

‘Clippers’ stop flushing station dollars

by Cpl. Matthew Shaw
Torii Teller Staff

Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni flushes about one million dollars down the drain every year. The Utilities Office recently started using a 99-cent piece of plastic that may cut the annual price of a toilet flush by 25 percent. The Utilities Office is testing “Tankee Clippers” on Midrise Building 589 by installing them in every “tank-style” toilet. Utilities employees will monitor the amount of water used per week with the device and compare it to other toilets without it. If the test proves successful for the next six weeks, all “tank-style” toilets on the air station will receive a “Tankee Clipper”. The air station will save between $250,000 and $300,000 per year if this new device works, says Chief Petty Officer James Trocke, utilities chief. Without the device, all the water from the toilet tank flushes and refills the bowl. When the device is connected, a quarter of the water returns directly to the tank, reducing the amount of water being wasted. Twenty-five percent of the water that is wasted in the flush is now going back into the tank, filling the tank up quicker, says Trocke. “The tank is not filled any less; If anything, it is filled quicker,” he said. “We have to conserve the resources we have. Energy and water conservation is everybody’s responsibility. It’s the right thing to do.”

Propane tanks banned for shipment

by Lance Cpl. Ryan O’Hare
Torii Teller Staff

Military personnel can no longer transport propane tanks as part of their personal property Household Goods shipment. The joint military service regulation began May 1. It comes as a result of recent fires and explosions in Household Goods carrier vans. “Propane tanks are a real big safety hazard to transport,” cautioned Gunnery Sgt. Willie Bennett, staff noncommissioned officer-in-charge of Household Goods. “If it ignites for any reason, it could not only burn up your goods, but everyone else’s around it.” Agreements with carriers to ship “purged” tanks, that have already been picked up, are at the warehouse, or are en route, will be delivered.

If a propane tank is found in a Household Goods shipment after May 1, a letter of warning will be issued and a record will be kept. “The warning states that if any prohibited articles are transported again in a government shipment, charges will be assessed too that individual,” Bennett said. No action will be assessed, if the shipment was in the warehouse or non-temporary storage prior to May 1. According to Bennett, people who own propane tanks, and are ready to relocate, should contact a commercial propane dealer for transportation or disposal. More information about this regulation can be found at www.mtmc.army.mil.

Return to sea

The moment finally came. The elderly Japanese woman shifted her weight to keep her balance on the bobbing boat. With the assistance of two Marines, Setsuko Rhoady stepped to the edge to complete her late husband’s final wish: to be scattered across the sea. May 11 marked the culmination of all the efforts of some Iwakuni community members who were dedicated to honoring a man who spent his life serving his country and the Marine Corps.

In honor of her husband's final wish, Setsuko Rhoady tosses a bouquet into the water prior to scattering her late husband's remains. This is the first burial at sea that has taken place at MCAS Iwakuni.

“It was nice to see the military turn out to honor a deceased veteran,” said Jim Morgan, friend of the Rhoadys and organizer of the burial. “Sergeant Major Guerrero put a call out for a few volunteers and got a response nobody really expected.” Although only four or five volunteers were expected, about 40 Marines and Sailors were present for the burial of retired Gunnery Sgt. Baldwin C. Rhoady.

“I really appreciate all the people who made it a success and the air station community in general for their support,” Morgan said. “That’s the first time I’ve ever seen it (MCAS Iwakuni) come together like this for a retiree. It did my heart good.” This was the first time a sea burial was conducted at MCAS Iwakuni. Gunnery Sgt. Rhoady was born in San Miguel County, N.M., Jan. 4, 1937. He joined the Marine Corps in 1954 and continued to serve for 19-and-a-half years. Among many duty stations, Rhoady served a tour in Vietnam as a jet engine mechanic and an aircraft weapons system specialist from August 1965 until September 1966. While serving on active duty he was awarded the Good Conduct Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, Navy Unit Commendation, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Service Medal, Republic of Vietnam Cross of Gallantry and Vietnam Campaign Medal. Rhoady is survived by his wife Setsuko and his younger sister, Lavonne Abbott, of Clarendon, Texas.

MALS-12 gets down and dirty on Sports Day

by Lance Cpl. Ryan O'Hare
Torii Teller Staff

Marines, Sailors and Japanese Sailors gathered at Penny Lake Field May 19, for a day of competition and camaraderie.

The 9th annual Sports Day consisted of various sporting events which allowed different sections of Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron 12 and their Japanese counterparts, Maritime Self Defense Force Maintenance Supply Squadron-31, to challenge each other for the "Sports Day" trophy.

At the end of each event, each team received points based on how they placed in each event. At the end of the competition, scores were added to determine the "Sports Day" champ.

The illustrious "Buttkicker" trophy, a golden boot atop a silver pedestal, was awarded to the team with the highest number of accumulated points at the end of the day's activities.

"Sports Day is a great chance for everyone to come together and have some fun," said Maj. Jimmy Canada, MALS-12 operations officer. "It gives everyone a great sense of camaraderie."

One of the Sports Day events, the "own the bone" competition, had two competitors attempting to rip a large dog bone out of the others grasp while engulfed in a circle of screaming spectators.

First Lt. Neal Plaskonos, MALS-12 assistant ordnance officer, proved he was the top dog in the event.

"It felt great to bring it home for ordnance," said Plaskonos. "I feel everyone out here is having a great time."

Other competitions included a tug of war, relay races and a "field of pain" event.

When it was all over, Avionics took home the win.

The "Buttkicker" was passed on from Supply, last years winner, to the new champions, Avionics.

After the morning competition, service-members lined up to eat barbecue. In between bites of burgers and hot dogs everyone talked about the day's events.

"Today was a lot of fun and very motivating," said Lance Cpl. Ranchell Simon, MALS-12 communication technician. "I enjoyed the excitement and support that everyone showed."

It was a great way to get to know each other outside of the shop."

MALS-12 exceeding standards

by Cpl. Matthew Shaw
Torii Teller Staff

Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron 12 recently received two awards in support of Marine Corps aviation for 1999 and is continuing to maintain and exceed the high standards they set.

They received the Marine Corps Aviation Association's Donald E. Davis Award, which recognizes the best Marine Aviation Logistics Squadron for the year, and the Secretary of Defense Maintenance Award (medium category), which annually recognizes the best maintenance organizations in the Department of Defense, for demonstrating a high degree of leadership, logistics expertise, innovation and exceptional accomplishments.

In addition to the squadron's awards, two Marines received awards for their individual efforts in supporting Marine Corps aviation.

Last year, MALS-12 supported six combat squadrons with a 79.5 percent mission capable rate. In March, the squadron had its highest aircraft readiness rates in five years: 90.1 percent mission capable and 84.7 percent full mission capable.

Also, non-judicial punishment rates for MALS-12 were the lowest in the III Marine Expeditionary Force for 1999.

"I believe the lower NJP rate was directly attributed to superior staff noncommissioned officer and non-commissioned officer leadership. Strong leadership and mentoring at that level is key," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Crane Dauksys, currently VMFA-212 ordinance officer and winner of the James Maguire Award.

"I talk to my Marines one-on-one," said Gunnery Sgt. Mark Obey. "You show personal interest in your Marines and they respond favorably."

Tour extensions also increased from the previous year.

"As far as extensions go, if a Marine is afforded the opportunity to work in a unit that is truly a 'cut above,' it carries a positive impact on the individual. It builds confidence and job satisfaction which in turn increases extensions and re-enlistments," Dauksys said.

"We tried to avoid being stuck in the 'this is the way we've always done it' mentality. The result was an increase in productivity and ordnance support for the squadrons of MAG-12," he said.

"You gotta do what you gotta do to get your job done," Obey said. "I have really good Marines working for me. I tell them what to do and they get it done."

The Marines of the award-winning squadron were honored by the awards they received for their performance last year, but they're striving to do even better this year.

"We'll continue by ensuring that Marines are continually being trained to sharpen their expertise in their primary Military Occupational Specialty," said Master Sgt. William Riker, MALS-12 aircraft maintenance chief. "We will keep coming up with more innovative ideas and work smarter not harder."

Corporal receives top honors

by Lance Cpl. Ryan O'Hare
Torii Teller Staff

Hard work and dedication are qualities that all Marines should possess. For one Marine, his dedication to mission accomplishment and Esprit de Corps has placed him a cut above the rest.

Corporal Ryan Schaaf, Station Operation Maintenance Division HH-46D Rescue Helicopter mechanic, received the 1999 Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni "Marine of the Year" award.

The Mineral Point, Wis., native, worked as a laser operator at a metal fabrication plant before joining the Corps in 1998. According to Schaaf, he joined the Marine Corps looking for a challenge.

As a lance corporal, Schaaf wanted to prove he was capable of handling any challenge.

"I wanted to show my leaders that I could do the job and possess the motivation to take responsibility later on," Schaaf said. "In order for me to prove that, I had to stand out above everybody else."

According to Staff Sgt. Christopher Dilport, SOMD flight line work center supervisor, Cpl. Schaaf's hard work and dedication to the job made him a definite candidate for "Marine of the Year."

Corporal Schaaf also received the Navy/Marine Corps Achievement Medal, as recognition for his dedication to the job.

"Corporal Schaaf is a poster Marine," Dilport said. "He's always taken the initiative to get the job done no matter what the challenge. I chose him for the board because I knew he could take it."

According to Schaaf, the positive work environment around him contributed greatly to his achievement.

Marine Corps Air Station Iwakuni awarded "Sailor of the Year" to H&HS Petty Officer 1st class Ronald Yang.

"I didn't think I would win," Yang said. "I know the other person that was on the board, and he's a pretty good Sailor."

There were only two Sailors competing for the title, because two of the winners from other quarters had transferred. After a uniform inspection and a series of questions, the board selected 33-year-old Yang as the "Sailor of the Year."

"It's an honor to receive this type of an award, because it's not something that you can get at anytime,"

Yang said.

Although he has earned the title, the early steps he took in his life directed him to it.

Fifteen years ago, the Manila, Philippines, native had only lived in the United States for about 2 years. After growing up in a big city in the Philippines, Yang moved to the small farming community of Stockton, Calif., at the age of 18.

Having no initial plans of enlisting, then 20-year-old Yang found himself in a Navy recruiter's office being challenged to take the Armed Services Vocational Aptitude Battery test. After proving what he could do, he decided to join in his family's tradition of United States Naval Service.

Now Yang is an aviation storekeeper at the H&HS Command Logistics, Government Commercial Purchase Card section and is responsible for purchasing aviation clothing and parts. Yang worked in the station Hazardous Minimization Center when it was being implemented here in 1998.

"He has made a lot of contributions to the shop by meeting critical projects," said H&HS, HAZMIN, Chief Petty Officer Robert Bugawan. "I know that with his leadership and management, I can count on him to step up during my absence."

During his time there, he proved that any task he was given was carried out with positive results. That made Yang the prime candidate scene, he put Locklear on a litter attached to hooks hanging from the hovering helicopter. The victim was then hoisted.

“When he was coming up, I could see his face,” said Dilport. “He looked like he was in serious pain.” According to Staff Sgt. Bradley Reilly, Patrol Leaders Course instructor, a three-hour trip down a mountain on a stretcher could cause further injury to the injured Marine, so SAR became the best option.

“We were way up in the mountains. It was very thick forest and rough terrain. If we had to walk him out of there on a stretcher, it would have taken about three hours to get him down that hill,” Reilly said.

After every flight, the SAR crew has a debrief where they discuss the details of the mission.

“It was pretty short on this one. Everything went very well,” Collins said.

Locklear was flown back to MCAS Iwakuni where an awaiting ambulance took him to the Branch Medical Clinic. Medical personnel treated him and he was released later that day in stable condition.

there for me,” Schaaf said. “They all contributed highly to my motivation.”

According to Schaaf, having a positive work ethic, reflects positively on the people you work with.

“I try to lead by example,” said Schaaf. “The best way to motivate somebody is to work with them on a job rather than stand over them, telling them to do this or that.”

Schaaf’s positive mental attitude and eagerness to help others reflects positively on the Marines in his shop.

“He definitely deserves the award,” said Lance Cpl. Jeff Schoen, flight line mechanic. “He sets a good example for others. He takes his time out to make sure we understand what we’re doing, and is willing to help out with any problems or questions we may have.”

Each quarter Marines go in front of the selection board, to be chosen as “Marine of the Quarter.” At the end of the year, the four “Marine of the Quarter” recipients present themselves again. After a series of inspections, drills, sword manual and questions on Marine Corps knowledge, the candidate with the highest score wins the honor.

“The fact that I got picked as Marine of the year is a great honor,” Schaaf said. “It makes me feel like I’m accomplishing something, like all the hard work has paid off.”

While continuing his hard work and dedication, Schaaf plans to apply for the Marine Enlisted Commissioning program, and continue his career in the aviation field as a pilot.

for the fourth quarter “Sailor of the Quarter Board” in 1999.

“I had no doubt that he had the caliber to be the “Sailor of the Quarter,” Bugawan said. “He stands out among his peers and truly sets the example as a leader. He really defines the role.”

After winning that board, Yang returned in December to compete in the “Sailor of the Year” board.

“I continue to do what I’m doing, because, as a leader, you’ve got to be consistent and be a role model to junior Sailors,” Yang said.

As a husband and father of three, Yang’s dedication to duty and performance has helped him to set future goals in his career.

“If you’re in the Navy and become a chief, you’re in a group that is different from the rest of the ranks,” Yang said. “So my goal is to become a chief, because to me, being a chief is like being a part of an elite rank in the Navy.”

Torii Pines golfer's haven

by Cpl. Michael Wiener
Torii Teller Staff

Whether for the beginner taking his whacks out of a sand trap or the skilled duffer perfecting his game, Torii Pines Golf Course provides everything necessary for a round of golf.

All SOFA status, Department of Defense, JMSDF personnel, family members and guests can play the “ninth hole course with class.”

“Our mission is to provide a quality recreation facility for the beginner through skilled golfer,” said John Robins, Torii Pines Golf Course manager.

Not everyone can afford to buy a set of clubs, but they can be rented through the pro shop for a small fee. Balls and tees are also sold.

“Basically we provide all the tools necessary to play golf here,” Robins said. “We also have lockers available for monthly rental at a fee, or if someone comes in for a day and wants to rent a locker, we can do that too.”

Not only does Torii Pines arm golfers with the weapons to destroy little white balls, but they also school those not up to par on the finer points of the game.

“We have several programs to help improve your golf game,” Robins said. “Group golf lessons focus on the basics of the game, and I highly recommend it for anyone just starting out. We also have private lessons, but those are more for the experienced golfer with a specific problem or concern.”

The group lessons are a four-day series of classes covering fundamentals, such as grip, back swing and club selection. The classes, free for E-5 and below, begin June 5 and run every other week through September.

Golfers can also develop their swing at the driving range which opens 30 minutes after the course closes. A bucket of about 20 balls costs 50 cents and clubs are loaned overnight from the pro shop at no charge.

“It’s a very unique range in the sense that it’s on one of the regular holes,” Robins said.

Throughout the year, golfers can put their skills to the test in any of several tournaments. Marine Corps Community Services, individual units and private organizations sponsor tourneys.

“Varying formats for the tournaments allow both the new and skilled golfer to compete with each other,” Robins said.

Chasing a little white ball and trying to hit it into a hole may not seem like competition or sport to some, but for those who do or are interested in attempting, Torii Pines Golf Course is the ideal venue.

Snow Day (PG)
Rated PG for brief mild peril and language

When a school in upstate New York is snowed in, a group of students hi-jack a plow to keep the school indefinitely closed. The effect of which will change the lives of a family headed by Chevy Chase. Pam Grier, Kyle Alisharan, Daryl Bruce and Iggy Pop co-star.

Skulls (PG-13)
Rated PG-13 for violence and brief sexuality

"Dawson's Creek" regular Joshua Jackson plays an ambitious Ivy Leaguer eager to fit in with the school's upper-crust set. His big opportunity comes when he's invited to join a secret society known as The Skulls. At first entranced by the club's exclusivity, the naive newcomer soon finds himself at the center of a senseless game when an mysterious death occurs.

Whatever It Takes (PG-13)
Rated PG-13 for thematic elements, sexual material and language

Shane West and James Franco team up to woo their respective objects of affection in this high school version of "Cyrano de Bergerac." Weaving a web of fake e-mails, plotted phone calls and contrived double dates, the two suitors' scheme seems auspicious enough until one of them suddenly has a change of heart. Christine Lakin and Jodi Lyn O'Keefe co-star.

This schedule is submitted by the Sakura Theater and is subject to change. Any questions or comments can be directed to MCCS at 253-4003.
